CFP: Gender and Identity in (Post) Colonial Discourse

The PhD Research Project Committee in Comparative Literature in collaboration with the Department of English at the University of Tlemcen and LLC lab will host the First International Study Day on

Gender and Identity in (Post) Colonial Discourse to be held on

22 April 2018

Confirmed keynote address by

Jean-Philippe IMBERT
Dublin City University
Ireland

We aim at exploring (post)colonial histories, literatures, gender representations, and identities from interdisciplinary and contemporary perspectives. We seek papers that examine gender through the lens of identity, while critically and creatively addressing the complex relationship between gender, race, class, religion, culture, art, and space, relating these aspects to how identity is shaped and expressed in Postcolonial studies. We are also interested in papers that consider methodological and analytical analyses of current approaches and theories on gender and identity.

PhD students working on these or related issues are invited to submit 250 word abstracts outlining 15 minute presentations by 10 April 2018 to llc.eng2018@gmail.com. Proposals should include a title, your name(s), contact details, and institution affiliation(s).

Potential topics may include but are not limited to :

Discourse analysis
Discourse analysis and identity
Discourse analysis and gender
(Post) colonial studies
Individual and collective identities
Selfhood and Otherness in (post)colonial discourse
Migration, Diasporic identities, Borders and Exile
Feminist theories
Gendered identities
