Holds a national conference on:

“Translation: between Passion and Recognition.”

On the International Translation Day
September 30th, 2021

Theme:

On the International Translation Day (September 30th) , we would like to pay tribute to translathers, translators and interpreters who are devoted exclusively to the translation activity . The history of humanity testifies that they were committed -behind the scenes- to protect universal knowledge, introduce great discoveries, participate in the economic development of the countries, act as mediators during crisis and wars, and diffuse culture and great literary works thanks to their passion of languages.

Translation is not a mere language process; one should consider the culture and the features of each language in order to produce a faithful and a high-quality version of the original. Meanwhile, translators remain invisible as non experts are not aware of their achievements, the numerous attributes and qualities that enable them to be professionals in the domain of translation .

In this respect, translathers and translators contributions are crucial in our daily life. So, what are the challenges they are facing? What are their previous and projected contributions? What is the role of translation and how to promote its recognition and valorization?

This conference seeks to shed light on the major role translators and interpreters play in myriad domains and disciplines through the world by inviting researchers, translators, academicians and professionals to share their experience and passion for languages and translation.
