CFP: Digital Literacy in TEFL: Current Trends and Prospects

21/12/2023

A national study day exclusive to doctoral students organized by The PRFU Team n°Ho2Lo1UN130120220002 under the supervision of the ESPT LAB and in collaboration with the Department of English at Tlemcen University.

This study day merges two main topics; this is CFP n# 1.

Digital literacy in TEFL (Teaching English as a Foreign Language) refers to the effective use of technology in English teaching and learning contexts. In the era of technological revolution, not least in AIs (Artificial Intelligence), digital literacy is no more a mere optional skill. Its role is rather extended to be a sign of effectiveness and excellence in teaching and learning practices. Depending on whether the user of technology is a teacher or a learner, digital literacy may encompass several skills such as: communicating, browsing online resources, adapting teaching material and so on and so forth. In this vein, this study day aims to gather ideas, experiences, discussions, and why not solutions to technology-related problems in the arena of TEFL as seen by doctoral students – the future generation of teachers. Therefore, we welcome any proposal of original presentations related to any aspect of Applied Linguistics and digital literacy.

Topic Strands (may include but are not limited to):

- Digital literacy and access to resources
- Digital literacy and communication skills
- Digital literacy and authentic language use
- Educational tools adaptability
