A Doctoral Study Day

On

Conflicting Approaches in Research Methodology

Tuesday, December 21 st, 2023

Chair: Prof. W. BOUKLIKHA GRAIA

Venue: FLPATP Laboratory

Theme: Conflicting Approaches in Research Methodology

Doctoral researchers often encounter the challenge of utilizing, explaining, and combining contrasting approaches in their research. These clashes extend beyond general methodological models, such as qualitative vs. quantitative or bottom-up vs. top-down, to short- and long-term approaches. The Doctoral Study day aims to raise cross-disciplinary discussions on the values and difficulties associated with working in methodologically and theoretically diverse fields.

Submission Guidelines

We invite submissions from doctoral researchers in the Faculty of Letters & Languages to contribute to the doctoral study day program. Submissions should explore the conference theme of "Conflicting Approaches in Research Methodology" and may cover, but are not limited to, the following topics:

Exploring conflicting methodological approaches

Strategies for combining diverse research methodologies

Domain-specific clashes and their implications

Challenges in methodologically diverse projects

Research methodology in education & didactics

Research methodology in language sciences

Research methodology in literature & civilization
