The Second Online Doctoral Workshop on the Journey of Becoming a Researcher: Experts' Debate

We are excited to invite you to participate in The Second Online Doctoral Workshop on the Journey of Becoming a Researcher: Experts' Debate, scheduled for November 11th, 2025 online using Google Meet. This doctoral workshop is organized by LLC Laboratory, at the university of Tlemcen, Algeria.

This panel discussion is an opportunity for doctoral students and academic to share their research-based knowledge. This event invites interests in qualitative and quantitative methods and epistemologies that present knowledge from a pragmatic, survey, discourse, phenomenology, narratives, (auto)ethnographies, and new methodologies integrated with technologies. This workshop aims to bridge the gap between cutting-edge qualitative research and quantitative research, particularly in the time of technology emergence in general. Highly recommended discussions are hosted to raise PhD students' potential in research.

Three fundamental questions will lead the debate:

- Q1: How do you perceive yourself as a researcher (duties & roles)?
- Q2: How does your research context make you reshaping of perspectives in connection to theory, framework, or model? Or the other way around?
- Q3: In an anecdote, tell us how a data analysis changed your research orientation?
